

Fight Song

Ana 92-34

Rachel Platten's Fight Song offers motivation and pushes people not to give up, even when times are hard, or when others don't believe in them. The title track from their new album motivates everybody who suffers from hardship. I hope more people get to hear and feel this music. Listening to uplifting songs like this may inspire people to keep going through tough times.

A line that I especially love in Fight Song is, "I might only have one match, but I can make an explosion." It shows that even something small can still have a big impact. It reminds me that, even when I feel weak, I can still manage to do something meaningful in the world. One of the most classic pieces of advice you'll hear is don't ever give up, and that you really aren't alone in your problems. Then we used to believe in our own strength and be more courageous. If only people knew that every small step leads to something, they wouldn't feel so hopeless. I wish more people could see that you don't have to be the strongest to make a difference. If only we all had this song as a reminder, life would be easier when navigating hard times.

I think Rachel Platten wrote this song to pick people up and keep believing. The song lyrics describe the story of one who fights but never surrenders. If only this was the theme to more songs, people would feel positive if they were going through hard times. The song gives me a reminder to not quit on my dreams, no matter what. I wish everybody had a song like this for when they feel down. Imagine the world were filled with even more confident humans if only more artists wrote songs encouraging us to believe in ourselves. I'd like to see more songs with inspiring lyrics become popular so that many people will feel empowered.

I think Fight Song is such an inspiring and high-energy song. The song is powerful, and its lyrics gives a powerful message, which is to never ever quit. If only they could hear the song and maybe get that reason to go on. It builds me up as a person, and that matters when I'm facing challenges or uncertainties. This song inspires me a lot, and I wish I had found out about it earlier.

This song also serves as a reminder that we should never let what others think get in the way of the confidence we have in ourselves. Everyone else should wash away the negativity and focus on their goals. Hopefully, this sits with others, because like the song says, I wish people knew how they can change their lives for their own good. If this song of encouragement is how life reminds us of the strength within when needed, it would be a lot easier to be strong through life trials. And it's not just a song, it's a message of hope and of courage. The lyrics are a call to action to have faith in yourself even when life is hard. If only more people believed in their potential, they would not be so afraid to pursue their dreams. I wish everyone felt free enough to trust themselves and forge ahead no matter what. You can do anything when you believe in yourself and in your power.